...Federal tax provisions

An analysis by the Agricultural and Food Policy Center at Texas A&M University suggests these proposals would result in an average additional tax liability of $726,104 per farm for 92 of the 94 representative farms in its database. A separate study by Iowa State University suggests that if stepped-up basis were eliminated, a full-time farmer who owns just 358 acres of farmland would see his or her tax liability from a lifetime sale increase from $475,248 to $860,572, or a staggering 81% increase.
