Watching the trick and treaters and the adults handing out the treats will convince anyone that good things are alive and well in Robert Lee. The kids looked awesome in their costumes, and the adults in the offices and businesses in town seem so appreciative of their efforts. Adults did a good job with costumes, too. And one dog looked pretty choice as well.

Parents, grandparents, and caretakers did a super job of costuming and seeing that everyone said "Thank You" and making sure that all kids had a hand to help out.

The local businesses and offices in Robert Lee go out of their way to support local efforts. Shopping and dealing with businesses and offices in town is the best way to show appreciation for their faithful participation in local events.

Thanks to those who shopped the book sale at the Coke County Library. Enthusiastic folks, although not many, bought a half a ton of books. Their patronage is appreciated.
