

Check Out Coke County Library

The Coke County Library and the Robert Lee City Hall are pleased to have on display Christmas train scenes created by Head Start students and their dads. The project was a result of the students reading and watching The Polar Express, the Christmas story of a mysterious train headed for the North Pole. The creative projects speak to dads who are engaged with their children, and children who are very creative. The collaborative efforts are a sight to see.

Christmas books are waiting children and parents getting ready for the Christmas season. Some new Christmas stories and lots of old-time favorites are ready for a reading session.

The Library will be closed on December 25, 26, and 27. For more information call 453-2495.
