Our actions may reflect love for one another, but we do not like to talk about that awkward four-letter word. It is time we change that. Love of God and neighbor is our greatest calling. It is not an option. It is an instruction. As we express that love, as we show it in our actions, and as we reckon with the uncomfortable, difficult, necessary nature of "love," we will find that it will improve God's creation, our relationships to one another, and the places that we call home.
