(Continued from page 5) to fit in an ice-cube tray compartment. Once the entire tray is filled with pieces of herb, carefully add a little water to each compartment. Then it's ready for the freezer. Once the herbs are completely frozen, transfer these cubes from the tray to re-sealable plastic freezer bags. Label the bag with the name of the herb. Then, when a recipe calls for that herb, figure on 1 ice cube yielding 1 teaspoon of it. To defrost the cube, just put it in a small strainer and run hot water over it.

Add dried herbs to what you're cooking about 30 minutes before the dish is done. To help the fresh herb keep its color and flavor, add the herb 10 minutes before you turn off the heat.

If your recipe is not specifically written for microwave cooking, keep in mind that fresh herbs tend to be milder when microwaved, so you may want to increase the amount you use. And the flavor of dried herbs is heightened in the microwave, so you may want to decrease the amount you use.

To make fresh herbs into dried herbs, place them on a paper towel and cook them in the microwave on high for about 1 minute. When dry, store them in labeled re-sealable plastic bags. They should retain their flavor for up to 1 year.

DID YOU KNOW?

You can keep lettuce fresh in a re-sealable plastic bag with a piece of almost-burnt toast. When the toast gets soggy, replace it with another piece. Lettuce should stay crisp in the fridge for a couple of weeks this way.

ALSO - try keeping your collard greens, kale, lettuce and other salad greens fresher by keeping them in a covered container in the frig, along with a piece of stainless-steel silverware.
