and families who are planning to hit the trails for a day trip at a park should also reserve day passes in advance, as many parks reach capacity limits daily. Some Texas State Park facilities remain closed due to the recent severe cold weather, so visitors are encouraged to check with their park of interest before hitting the road.

Visitors can purchase day passes up to one month in advance, guaranteeing access to parks even during busy times. To purchase a day pass or to reserve a campsite, visit the Texas State Parks Reservation System page on the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department (TPWD) website or call (512) 389-8900.

Guests, including annual pass holders, who have reserved day passes or campsites but are unable to visit are encouraged to cancel their reservations, so others have an opportunity to visit the park.

Those visiting state parks are encouraged to recreate responsibly and follow posted rules and regulations to ensure safety during the ongoing pandemic, including wearing a mask when inside buildings or when gathered with others. See the online state park guidelines to stay safe and healthy. Local and statewide limitations and restrictions apply and can change rapidly. TPWD recommends checking social media or calling parks directly for updates before traveling.

For those who are unable to make your Texas State Park reservations in time but still want to enjoy the outdoors this Spring Break, there are many other options besides state parks. Texas Nature Rocks is a great resource to find local city and county parks, green spaces, nature centers and other outdoor opportunities near you. Visit the Texas Nature Rocks website for more information.

Young Farmer & Rancher Conference slated

By Julie Tomascik
Texas Farm Bureau Editor

Registration is underway for Texas Farm Bureau's (TFB) Young Farmer & Rancher (YF&R) Conference.

The conference is designed to equip young leaders in agriculture with tools and information needed to increase their agricultural advocacy efforts and help with farm and ranch decisions. The event is set for April 9-11 at the Austin Marriott North Hotel in Round Rock. Sessions will also be available via Zoom for those who are unable to travel to the event.

"This conference is for any young farmer and rancher across the state," Kaylin Isbell, TFB's YF&R Advisory
