USDA Seeks Applications for Grants to Improve the Quality of Rural Housing

Agriculture Secretary Tom Vilsack announced today that applications for grants are being accepted to help low- and very-low-income rural residents repair their homes.

"These grants help limited-income rural homeowners make necessary repairs and improvements for safer, healthier and more energy-efficient dwellings," Vilsack said. "I strongly encourage all eligible organizations to apply for this funding."

"The costs associated with maintaining a home are a challenge for many rural homeowners," said Paco Valentin, USDA Rural Development State Director. "USDA Rural Development is proud to provide housing rehabilitation funding to help rural Texans meet and improve their housing needs, a critical component to the long term sustainability of our communities."

USDA Rural Development is offering Housing Preservation Grants to intermediaries such as town or county governments, public agencies, federally recognized Indian Tribes, and non-profit and faith-based organizations. The grants are then distributed to qualified homeowners or owners of multi-family rental properties or cooperative dwellings who rent to low- and very-low-income residents. USDA does not provide funding directly to homeowners under this program.
