Beware the mountain lion

by Cecil Cherry

My cat is missing. We brought back two cats to Robert Lee. They were brother and sister. About two years ago the sister just died one day. The next day he started saying meow every minute all day long. He did this every day since that time (where is my sister?) We would console him but it did not help. He is with his sister now. We feel like the Mountain Lion got him.

We understand one person did see the lion and cub in their yard and saw the mother pick up their cat and ran off. Another person saw the mother and cub walking in his yard. The ground was soft due to the rain. The next day he found a good tracks of the mother and cub. A cast was made of the track of the mother. I saw it and it was about the size of my hand. The lion has been seen in the area just off the highway going to Colorado City and along the Colorado River around Fern Haven Park.

Just two days ago a friend said he found tracks in the area of his home. It seems that they must hunt in town, as much of their food is no longer there, such as the rabbit. So be careful when it is dark, as lions could hurt or kill a person.

20 Reasons Why a Child Needs an Active Father

by Stephen Green, Ph.D.

Fathers play a critical role in the development of their children. The latest research indicates that fathers who are actively involved in raising their children can make a positive and lasting difference in their lives. In contrast, this same research reveals several potentially negative outcomes for children whose fathers are not involved. Listed below are 20 reasons why your child needs you to be an active father. Being an active father:

1. Lets the child know that you love her/him. Love involves more than saying the words, "I love you." Fathers who love their children demonstrate their love by spending quality and quantity time together. Children who feel loved are more likely to develop a strong emotional bond with their father and a healthy self-esteem.

2. Provides child with greater financial resources. Research clearly indicates that families with an active father are "better off" financially. This means that children with active fathers will be more likely to have access to resources that facilitate healthy development (e.g., food, clothing, shelter, quality medical care).

3. Provides child with a positive male role model. Children, regardless of gender, need positive male and female role models. Children tend to model behavior (positive and negative) that they witness on a consistent basis. Active fathers can promote positive behaviors by setting a proper example for their children.

4. Provides child with emotional support. In addition to financial support, children also need emotional support from their parents. Active fathers listen and support their children when they experience joy, sadness, anger, fear, and frustration. Fathers who support their children emotionally tend to raise children who are more in tune with the needs of others.

5. Enhances child's self-esteem. Self-esteem refers to how a person feels about himself. Children with high self-esteem tend to be happier and more confident than children with low self-esteem. Active fathers promote their children's self-esteem by being fully involved in their lives and letting them know that they are highly valued.

6. Enhances child's intellectual development. Children who are
