... Open Carry

405.8 last year. Vermont is ranked 48th in violent crimes and has had constitutional carry since it was founded. Wyoming, another constitutional carry state, is ranked 43rd in violent crimes.

It has long been known that criminals carry weapons regardless of licensing laws or even bans. OTC and others who are strong 2nd Amendment supporters believe law abiding citizens should be able to defend their lives, their family and their property. Numerous studies have shown that open carry is a deterrent to crime. In one study, 81% of violent criminals interviewed reported that it was important to determine if a potential victim was armed.

The Many Faces of Medicine

By Robin Roller

Have you ever heard the term "born with a silver spoon in your mouth"? You might be surprised at its origin.

Before refrigeration in Europe, it was customary for the wealthy families to use silver for food storage. Silver has strong antibiotic, antibacterial and antiviral properties. A silver coin often would be dropped in a bottle of milk to keep it from spoiling. After refrigeration, this practice became obsolete.

The term "blue blood" was used to refer to these same families because the silver that stored their food, after many years and constant use, left traces. This caused a condition called argyria - characterized by the blue grey coloring of the skin, very noticeable, but harmless.

Now to answer the opening question: These noble families would often give their babies silver spoons much like a pacifier to suck on in order to build their immune systems. This was done to keep them healthy. Remember, they had the plague and other epidemics that created a fear for infant mortality.

The practice is little known today. However, silver is now becoming popular in the form of colloidal silver. Colloidal, meaning suspended in water, silver has been said to have more health benefits than most anything you can get your hands on today.

The substance has been said to be able to defeat viruses which, according to modern medicine, is impossible.

I have used colloidal silver safely. I make my own and it's easy to do. My only personal experience with this is using it when I feel run down or think I might be coming down with a cold. I very seldom get sick.

However, please research the topic for yourself.

When researching, please realize some sites are trying to discourage its use. If it does everything it's said to do, the huge drug companies lose money because you aren't sick. Look into several sites, both pro and con, to make an informed decision.

I wish I could tell you that I've seen it in action extensively. I can't. Would I have gotten sick if I hadn't taken it? Who knows. If it didn't, I doubt the drug companies would be attempting to discredit it and the medical professionals recommending it. Stay informed and stay well.
